REFINERS WANT IT FREE

It Was Made Plain That Strenuous Efforts Were Made by Cane Sugar Refiners to Secure Free Entry

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 18.—The lobby committee abandoned temporarily the sugar protection lobby and considered the free sugar side, calling Frank Lowrey, of New York, who directed much publicity under the name of a committee of wholesale grocers. Lowrey admitted his employment by the Federal Sugar Refining Company and agreed that free sugar would be a benefit to cane sugar refiners.

Earlier the committee made public a series of letters written by Henry Oxnard and Truman Palmer showing the long continued effort to influence legislation at Washington to control congressional committees, and to direct national political affairs in support of a continuation of a protective sugar tariff.

The committee tonight granted the request of Melville E. Stone, general manager of the Associated Press, to testify tomorrow regarding claims made in Manila letters regarding the publicity beet sugar interests hoped to secure.

Lady Richardson in 9 Cts a Yard Dress

Lady Constance Richardson, preparing for an American vaudeville tour, arrived in the United States dressed in a peculiar gown which, she said, cost her 9 cents a yard. How often she will wear it is not known. It is a very loose affair, so loose that the reporters, who found her in her cabin on the liner that brought her, backed out, thinking she was in her night dress.

She is going to give four dances in her vaudeville tour. And she frankly admits that she dances to make money.

"I am doing these dances, first, to earn needed money, and secondly, to show people that classical dancing purifies the mind and tends to strengthen and perfect the body.

"The human body is the most marvelous work of God, and it is a sin to regard nakedness from a sex point of view. People have got to be reeducated, and children taught to develop their bodies to the highest point of perfection in strength and beauty. False modesty is idiotic and wicked. Children should not be taught to cover all but face and hands.

By Associated Press.

DESERTED BENCH DURING ARGUMENT

JUDGE DAVIDSON AND JUDGE HARPER REFUSE TO HEAR ARGUMENTS

Special to The News.

AUSTIN, Texas, June 18.—Quite a stir was created late this afternoon in the Court of Criminal Appeals, when two of the judges deserted the bench during the argument of an ex parte proceeding.

Presiding Judge Davidson left because Judge Harper and Judge Prendergast had agreed to let Assistant Attorney General Keel, address the court in behalf of the controller, when Judge Davidson had pointed out that the controller had no interest in the case. Keel declined to talk and Judge Davidson returned.

Judge Harper then refused to hear Senator McGregor, who was representing the relator in the case and he left the bench and retired to his office. The case involves the constitutionality of the provision of the liquor law which authorizes the controller to forfeit a liquor license.

This is the first time this has occurred in the higher courts of Texas.

INCREASED RATES ON IRON PRODUCTS

THIS HAD BEEN SUBJECT OF CONTROVERSY IN DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS

PROVIDING TARIFF BOARD

An Amendment Was Proposed Providing For a Tariff Board of Nine, Not More Than Four From Same Party

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 18.—The finance committee has increased the proposed rates on pig iron and spelter concerning which some democrats made a fight in the house caucus. Majority members discovered the provision in relation to colored sugar might make all refined sugar dutiable at two cents a pound.

The committee changed the wording after experts reported that the language might operate as a joker. Senator Works proposed an amendment providing a tariff board of nine members or ex-member of congress, the same political party, and none a member of ex-member of congress. The committee tonight completed all schedules. Senator Ker, issued a call for senatorial democratic caucus for Friday.

Hold Up Train So Baby Could Sleep

Because Juliana, the four year old heiress to the throne of Holland, could not sleep while the train that carried her was running, it was sent to a siding for the night and remained there till she awoke in the morning. This occurred on a trip Queen Wilhelmina made with her little girl from Holland to a watering place in Germany, where she went to join her husband, Prince Henry.

The trip was unexpected. The prince had remained away so long that the queen thought she would go and look him up. Like most Dutch mothers she would not think of leaving her little girl behind. Night coming on, the little one could not sleep while the train was in motion. Then the cars occupied by the heir to the throne, the queen, and her suite, were shunted off to sleep in peace till the morning. The heiress is a healthy young one to whom the loss of a night's sleep would not be very injurious. But she is so far the only heir in the Dutch royal family, and great care is taken of her.

WOMEN WILL AID FAIR OPERATION

THEIR SHAPING INFLUENCE IN MAKING GREAT EXPOSITION WILL BE FELT.

HAVE BROADER OUTLOOK

Stinnett Asserts Belief That Every Woman in the Great Panhandle Is in Favor of the Project.

(A. S. STINNETT)

The establishment of the Panhandle State Fair would proclaim to the people of Texas, and those of other States the fact that the great Panhandle was now in reality and in all seriousness open and ready for business.

A program covering the daily exercises could be arranged so as to arouse and excite deepest interest in all the people of the Panhandle, and a widespread concern in the people throughout Texas.

It would be in order to have the Governor of the State open the fall with a stirring address, which he of course would be glad to do, and it could be arranged for an address each day of the Fair from such State officials as the Lieutenant-Governor, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Commissioner of Agriculture and Statistics, and such other officials as are engaged in directing the livestock and experimental stations throughout the State, and men from one district or another who have reached prominence thru their foresight, energy and masterful ability, and who in reality have been largely instrumental in making Texas one of the greatest commonwealths of the world today.

In this way the Fair would enter upon its career with such notable prominence as to attract the attention of the press of the State, and during the progress of this Fair there would be arrested and concentrated upon it more or less the attention, interest and concern of the great masses of the people of Texas.

The prominent officials of the State, from the Governor down, and the sprinkling of eminent men drawn thither from every quarter of the State would have an opportunity, such as they would not otherwise have in a lifetime, to come in direct contact with the fruits of the soil, and the substantial evidences of the resources and possibilities of a region concerning which they have only had other hazy or erroneous information heretofore. They would be captured by the exhibits, and would not doubt be so stirred through the revelation made as to voice such praise and approval as would cause the world to take notice, and at the same time afford a deeper root to the faith and conviction of all such people residing in the Panhandle, who from one cause or another, have wavered, and who through indecision and lack of confidence, have not put forth their best efforts and gone forward as their best efforts.

I make this forecast, in view of the fact that there are many who doubtless have not perceived the broadening effects and the manifold blessings that would result from a Fair of the magnitude that would be assured by all the people of the Panhandle operating and working as a unit, and so blending their products as to testify eloquently and irresistibly to the countless resources of perhaps the finest and most unimpaired given undeveloped agricultural and livestock region of the United States.

It is a known fact, and cannot be gainsaid, that the twenty-five million acres of Panhandle land, is the largest continuous and unbroken body of arable fertile soil to be found upon this continent or any continent of the known world, and this fact alone should awaken emotions of pride, enthusiasm, confidence and patriotism in the Panhandle people, such as is possessed by no other people in any known land or clime.

There is another feature connected with the establishment of such a fair that has not been commented upon heretofore, and that is the enlistment of the services and co-operation of the women of the Panhandle. It has been my observation that women by nature are progressive, and ever fall to line up with the larger and broader undertakings with the same zeal and enthusiasm as is the case with the men, and if there should be any difference, such would be on the side in favor of the women.

It must not be imagined that in their co-operative efforts the women would be confined to the aesthetic, decorative and altruistic, as they have long since evinced a capacity for grasping and handling all things.
